When writing an article, don't overuse keywords. Incorporate them well into your article. Make sure they appear in the title, first paragraph and in the concluding paragraph. Don't use them in the body of the article as this gets repetitive.

One tip to consider when considering article marketing is that writing is not as bad as you may think it is. It is important to write just as you would speak and then clean up any of the grammatical errors afterward. After practice, you should be able to write short articles in only a matter of minutes.

After you have completed an article, put a resource box at the end of the page urging readers to get involved. Make sure that you include a link back to your company website. This will generate activity, and hopefully revenue, for your personal business and increase awareness about who you are and what you do.

In article marketing, aside from good headlines that grip your audience, you need to have great titles. It's these titles that alert the readers to both the subject of the article and why they should read it. Try keeping your titles catchy and memorable, just don't go overboard with them.
